Smokefree Nurses Aotearoa/New Zealand (SNANZ) supports work to reduce death and disease caused by tobacco. Māori nurses and Māori midwives identify as one workforce and together we are committed to te Tiriti o Waitangi and to building Māori health through the vision of a tobacco free Aotearoa/New Zealand by 2020. Tobacco is an addictive and deadly drug. It has a catastrophic impact on the health of all New Zealanders and contributes to and perpetuates health inequities between Māori and non-Māori [1]. As nurses we witness the direct and indirect results of tobacco use on the health and wellbeing of patients and their whānau.

Research with Māori women about smoking cessation shows that being a healthy role model is important to them [2] and for Māori nurses this is doubly important because they carry their professional responsibilities into every part of their lives. Māori nurses are a conduit to Māori communities and ensuring that they as health professionals can “walk the talk” is a recurring kaupapa of every Māori student nurse hui each year. Healthy lifestyles, including quitting smoking, are a priority for Māori nurses. Indeed, the Māori nurse smoking rate (31%) is below the overall Māori smoking rate (45%) and the smoking rate for Māori women (50%) [3, 4]. However ninety percent of Māori nurses in the workforce (approximately 3000) are women.

Tobacco use is a major barrier to enlisting all of New Zealand’s largest Māori health workforce to undertake smoking cessation training and to help patients and whānau to quit smoking. Unsurprisingly, those who smoke find it difficult to advise patients who smoke to quit. The SNANZ Māori Strategy reflects the desire of Māori nurses to support quitting among their colleagues and to support a Tupeka Kore Aotearoa [5].

This strategy was written collaboratively by Evelyn Hikuroa, Angilla Perawiti and Jeanine Tamati-Elliffe in consultation with Māori nurses and midwives from Te Kaunihera o Nga Neehi Maori o Aotearoa, Te Runanga o Aotearoa NZNO, Te Ao Maramatanga, Wharangi Ruamano and Nga Maia o Aotearoa me te Wai Pounamu. The authors particularly wish to acknowledge the following people for their input, time and passion for this important kaupapa: Pauline Allan-Downs, Hineroa Hakiaha, Mairi Lucas, Kerri Nuku, Leanne Manson, Joanne Rama, Tio Sewell, Grace Wong.

Nō reira, ki a koutou i hāpai te hoe o Te Waka Tupeka Kore i runga i ngā tī o mihi, e rere atu ngā mihi ki a koutou.

Mauri ora ki a tātou katoa.
